International Association of Business Communicators (IABC)/Cleveland at annual Vision Award/ Scholarship Luncheon

CLEVELAND, June 23 -- "10th and Progress," the 2006 annual report of the Saint Luke's Foundation, has been recognized with a Vision Award by the International Association of Business Communicator's (IABC) Cleveland chapter. The Vision Awards recognize excellence in Northeast Ohio's communications community.

At the luncheon, held on June 11, 2008, the chapter also presented its IABC Cleveland Communicator of the Year Award to Stephen Fry, president of the Northeast Ohio division of Time Warner Cable. IABC Cleveland also presented its second annual Future Vision Award scholarship to an outstanding regional student working toward a career in communication.

This year's recipient, Angela Kaufman, is a junior journalism major at Bowling Green State University from Sandusky. Kaufman is a dean's list student who works a full-time job to pay for school, in addition to participating in the Association of Health Care Journalists, the Literary Club, and volunteering with the American Red Cross. Kaufman impressed the selection committee with her clear career goals, strong writing skills and well-rounded resume. Kaufman received $2,000 toward her senior year studies, in addition to an internship at the Domestic Violence Center of Cleveland. The scholarship is funded through proceeds raised during the annual Vision Awards Silent Auction.
